Sun

into print several days earlier and add the new pages, we have been frustrated.

From 'day one', The Choctaw Sun set a new, higher standard for journalism in Choctaw County and we have worked hard to keep it that way. We take pride in bringing you news coverage of the highest quality that is humanly possible. Our staff spends many long hours reading, calling, interviewing, researching, writing and doing page layout, and in order for us to do the best job possible, we must have an adequate amount of time to compile and assemble all of that material into the newspaper that you now hold in your hands.

Shortly after we began the new twice-weekly schedule, our print schedule underwent changes that made meeting our deadlines increasingly difficult. Those changes were not something we could control and were necessary in order to meet the time requirements set down by the company that prints our paper.

It became necessary to have the finished pages into the hands of the shop that prints our paper several hours earlier than our former "press time", which really put a "squeeze" on us as far as the amount of time we have had to research, write and do layout work.

Coupled with the mandatory earlier deadlines, preparing two papers a week for mailing and delivering it to dozens of point-of-sale locations in four counties is eating away at what precious time we have to work on the newspaper as a whole.

Therefore, as the owners and staff, we have unanimously decided that the high standards we set from the beginning of this newspaper are far more important to this county and our readers – and to us – than the quantity of publications.

For this reason, effective with next Wednesday's edition (March 21st) we will return to a once-a-week publication schedule.

There will no doubt be some who are disappointed by our decision to return to a once-a-week publication schedule, and for that we are sorry.

The "specialty pages" that you have come to enjoy - "Food", "Kids Page", "Money" and others -- will continue to appear in the paper.

For those of you who subscribed during the period from January to the present, we will extend your subscriptions accordingly to make up for the difference in cost or we will refund the difference if you so choose. Subscription rates will return to their pre-Jan. 1st rates effective immediately.

We thank you for your support and, as always, we welcome your comments and suggestions.
